Dear friends

2011 was important for us. It marked the first step forward in the evolution of our organization. It was the year of our birth.

The idea of setting up the youth movement, Help Young, didn't come suddenly. Due to the lack of or limited core funding, youth-led organizations face extreme difficulty securing funds for core operating costs, including the funds necessary to run an office, compensate staff and cover other overhead expenses. This is especially true for youth organizations that may have limited experience and lack a financial history.

"Look at the roots!" - Kozma Prudkov said. This statement underlines the very method of the solution of problems which we choose. Sure young people have the best understanding of the challenges, strengths and opportunities but an active youth is a power of change and positive transformation to which should be given all possibilities for growth and self-realization.

Throughout the last months of 2011, the Help Young made a concerted effort to directly influence decision-making processes at different levels in order to ensure the effective participation of young people in key venues and opportunities. Our involvement in these processes had successful outcomes and in all cases led to increased youth participation and added opportunity for youth collaboration and advocacy. Throughout this report you can see how much a small group of like-minded people can do when united by an idea to make the world better.

Our community is too young and needs support of friends and like-minded people. 27 persons became volunteers from such countries as the Ukraine, the USA, Mexico, England, Germany, Spain, Italy, Pakistan, Syria etc. and growing. This year the Help Young also spent some time preparing for the next chapter of our work, developing our Strategic Plan, which will take us into 2012. As we closed 2011 as beginners, we will continue to think strategically about our role in the Help Young movement and about how we can work toward promoting, improving skills and protecting young people. As a completely youth-led, volunteer driven, members-based organization, we are proud to be a working example of the contributions that young people can make to high-level decision making and global dialogues.

Thanks to all of the members and staff that worked so hard to help achieve the goals of the Help Young. Thanks to all of our donors without whom we would not be able to participate at different meetings or help train future youth leaders. Thanks for understanding that our future is in our children and understanding our responsibility towards our children and for the world they grow up in.

As a young organization we are looking forward to new and strengthened partnerships, to see the Help Young family grow, and to find innovative ways of working toward a world where the opportunities, talents and rights of all young people are respected and fulfilled.

I hope you will support us in 2012.

Rustam Becnazarov, founder, ideologist and the coordinator of International youth movement Help young

- Create a club and a resource center.

Anyone who wish to join the embodiment of these plans, please join.

Volunteering

It is great to note that many people have joined the development of the movement. They are designers, translators of English and Italian languages, copywriters, everyone who has posted our buttons on their sites and information about us on their web-sites, all those who helped in spreading the word about our movement and our projects, who have made significant discounts, if the service has not been free of charge, who have placed piggy bank for donations in their shops.

We appreciate every contribution and are grateful to all who took part in our causes and remains with us this year.

We need representatives of the Fund in regions, web-programmers, designers, copywriters, translators, fundraisers, journalists, PR-managers, promoters, and just active people who want to learn something new and make a good deed.
